

Sophie Edwards

Sophie is the Head (UK & EU) of Business Development (Learning Partners) at NEBOSH, where she supports global organisations in advancing workplace health, safety, and environmental education. With nearly three years in this role, she has focused on fostering strategic partnerships and driving business development initiatives that increase the accessibility and impact of NEBOSH qualifications. Working closely with key stakeholders, including HSE, INSHPO, and government bodies worldwide. Sophie and her team help elevate the profession's profile, promote best practices, and deliver meaningful learning opportunities across diverse sectors.

Her career spans roles in manufacturing, HVACR training, product innovation, and market entry strategy, giving her a distinctive ability to connect technical expertise with commercial growth. She has collaborated with organisations across many industries, consistently championing high standards and effective practice. At NEBOSH, she leverages this background to enhance the global reach of our learning partner network and support initiatives that prioritise safety, risk management, and well-being.